An El Paso mining man, expert on statistics having a direct bearing on the mining situation in Mexico, sums up the situation to follow the issuance and enforcement of the new Carranza tax decree in the republic to the south. Starting off with the statement that "the mining industry in northern Mexico is one upon which depends the solution of the economic freedom of the country, in which employment of the mass of Mexican labor plays a

Escaped From Prison.

Finally, through an arrangement which we do not care to discuss at this time, my brother and three others made their escape from the state penitentiary in November. Two bars were cut and it made an opening just large enough for a small man to get through. As my brother had grown stout with his confinement, it was necessary for one of the men to go first and put him through while another stayed in the cell and pushed. One of 30 Madera Company Employes Dies of Pneumonia After Release.

The funeral of Richard L. Merritt

The funeral of Richard L. Merritt. one time jeweler of New Orleans, and for the past two decades a civil engineer working from one end of Mexico to another, was held Tuesday afternoon from the parlors of McBean, Simmons & Hartford with interment in Concordia cemetery.

Merritt was found by a friend who knew him in his more fortunate days in a cheap lodging room in the grip of pneumonia. The Madera company, with which Merritt had been employed in the engineering department, learned of his condition, and he was hurried to a hospital and given every relief possible. The malady and 65 years got the best of the engineer's life and Sunday night he died.

Held is Prison by VIDs.

Merritt was one of the 30 men to be imprisoned in Chihushus by Villa and held for ransom. He had only arrived in El Paso two days prior to his death.

Twenty years ago be came to El Paso a man of considerable wealth. He went into Mexico and lost everything in a number of deals on the west coast. He had the appearance of Mark Twain and because of his keen sense of humor, his faculty of entertaining and making every camp he entered a sort of jovial affair, he was reckoned to be like the American humorist in feeling as well as in appearance.

He was personally known to most of the mining and civil engineers of the southwest. His kindness of heart often got him into trouble, and one story is told of how he remained behind to explain to several Mexican chain boys how to gather in the links, how he was left upon the sund dunes of central Chihundua and wandered for 20 hours without food or rest because he had kept to the rear rather than to the front.
